Creating Indigenous global studies means decolonizing Indigenous higher education institutions. A global Indigenous approach centers Indigenous ownership of their own histories, education, languages and cultures. Recovering and dealing with historical trauma on their own terms is a central aspect of this field of study. Join friends from the Smithsonian, Association of American Colleges and Universities, and Indiana University for a three-hour workshop. Help create this new field.